Food and animal feed safety – proof across all borders

The demand for food safety from all members of the value-chain today is high. From the agricultural producer to the retailer, from the carrier to the machine and packaging manufacturer – every enterprise ultimately shares in the responsibility. Document the conformity of your processes with current legislation and quality requirements with a certification according to the international industry standard ISO 22000. The DEKRA seal is your proof of safety for customers all over the world.

What ISO 22000 is all about

In contrast to all other common quality standards in the foods and animal feed industry, ISO 22000 is valid throughout the industry all over the world. All industry players and suppliers can apply this comprehensive standard, as it includes the HACCP requirements.

Management systems for food safety according to ISO 22000 are to a large extent set up according to the familiar standards ISO 9001 and ISO 14001. This makes it considerably easier for a certified company to fulfil its legal obligations in terms of product liability (organisation, selection, control, documentation and diligence requirements).

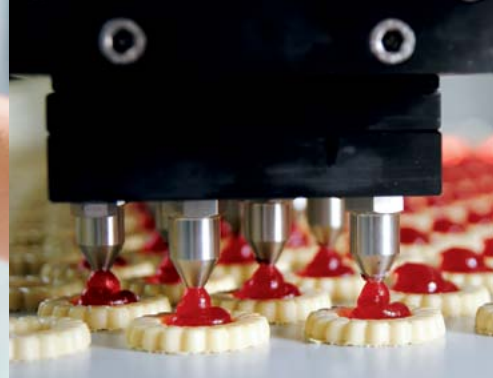

With a DEKRA certification according to ISO 22000 you will be reducing your liability risks and demonstrating your position over all borders as a quality-oriented, reliable partner in the food industry at the same time.

What DEKRA offers you

A consistently applied ISO 22000 quality management system helps you to identify possible risks at an early stage and systematically avoid them. Rely on DEKRA's international industry experience for your certification and enjoy the following benefits:

- ▶ Uniform, comprehensive quality yardstick for all processes related to food and animal feed
- ▶ Globally accepted certification
- ▶ Effective precaution against liability risks
- ▶ High degree of compatibility with other management standards such as ISO 9001, ISO 14001 and OHSAS 18001
- ▶ Minimum documentation and certification expense for integration into existing management systems

We provide straight forward practice-oriented support in all certification matters on a long-term basis. Neutral and independent. And with your own goals in focus.
